Promoting happy, healthy and sustainable living at Hill House and beyond.

COUNTRY TRUST

Through food, farming and countryside experiences, the Country Trust empowers children to create change in their lives and the world around them. They are a dynamic national education charity dedicated to bringing alive the working countryside for children least able to access it.

One way they support children to develop curiosity, create connections and building confidence is through "Farm in a Box" - bringing the farm to the classroom. Climate Action Farm in a Box is a free, hands-on learning programme that builds connections between farming, the food we eat and climate change.

Where children learn and grow

WHAT'S IN THE BOX?

As part of our One Planet Living work, Hill House School have signed up to the Country Trust and we have received our first "Farm in a Box!"

It was a wonderful box of resources based on the topic of Biodiversity.

FOOTPRINT

Students took part in activities including:

- "What is a farm" - Learning about what a farm is and does, looking at farm animals and their role on the farm. Exploring different crops grown on a farm and using some of these to make a group collage
- "Weather and Climate" - Learning about the connection between farming and weather, looking at different ways of observing the weather and collecting data.
- "Stripy feelings" - Learning about Climate Change and how it impacts the planet. Looking at what this feels like and exploring emotions such as 'sad', 'upset' and 'angry.'
