

This Week:

- World Cup 2022
- Jackson Pollack inspired art
- Driving range skills
- Getting in the Christmas spirit

This week we have been celebrating the start of the world cup which has been a great topic for Newsround and Debate. Students have been discussing whether Footballers should get Equal Pay for Equal Play, an interesting topic that led to further conversation about gender inequalities in pay as well as range of other areas that gender differences can be seen. We have also looked at Qatar as a country and why people have queried whether it is an appropriate country for the World Cup to be held.

In Home Cooking Skills, students have been getting into the festive spirit by cooking Ginger bread and decorating this in a Christmas theme.

Art has taken an abstract approach this week with students looking at artists such as Jackson Pollock, students have taken this style and created their own Jackson Pollock inspired pieces. Some great inspirational pieces, I am sure you'll agree.

In English this week students have been using their creative writing skills to build their planning and structuring skills thinking about their narrative style and pace of writing.

At the end of the week students visited the driving range, they have supported each other to build their skills, who knew that the driving range was such a physical activity?!

If women's football earned as much revenue as men's then they should pay the same

Women's football should be more mainstream so that it can bring in more revenue
