

Owl Visit

This week Somerset School was fortunate to be visited by a group of Owls, which we were later informed is actually called a parliament of owls (Something that not many of us knew at all!). Students were welcomed to come and meet the owls, learn all about them and then were invited to handle them if they wished.

Despite the wind and rain students were able to call the owls and witness them fly from one side of the playground before coming to rest on their gloved hand. Something that the majority of students were excited to take part in despite this being a new experience and out of many people's comfort zones.

It was amazing to watch the students connect with the owls and get to spend so long up close with these wonderful birds. All the students were compassionate and gentle with the animals and were able to showcase some exceptional people skills with each other that involved sharing, understanding and empathy.

We'd like to thank Belinda for organising this wonderful event.
